

Would you throw a poison gas bomb into a den of wolf pups?

© Leo Keller

Alaska Governor Sarah Palin's administration has approved the use of poison gas bombs to kill wolf pups in their dens.

Her Board of Game also recently approved the use of helicopters to intensify the wolf slaughter from the air. This is not only morally repugnant, but threatens a long-term National Park Service research study aimed at gathering needed data on predators and prey in Alaska.

It's all part of Governor Palin's ongoing war on wolves. (Did we mention that she's targeting bears too? even mothers with cubs?)

It's appalling and totally inconsistent with American values. And it happens only in Alaska.

Despite opposition from hundreds of experts who say there is no scientific or other justification, the slaughter continues. Governor Palin doesn't listen to scientists — but she may listen to you.

Go to www.eyeonpalin.org and tell Sarah Palin to stop this senseless slaughter.

Paid for by Defenders of Wildlife Action Fund